MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER
APPLIES TO ALL ACTIONS

Cecchi, District Judge.

These four matters come before the Court upon Thomas James Clauso's ("Clauso") filing of four letters in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC), Docket Entry Nos. 67 - 70, and Clauso's commencement of a new civil action, Clauso v. Lagano, Civil Action No. 12-5601 (CCC), and it appearing that:

I. Clauso has instituted a number of civil rights and habeas matters in this District.¹ Specifically, it appears that:

A. Clauso has commenced at least five habeas matters asserting jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 2254.

1. While still serving the prison term ensuing from his first conviction, Clauso commenced a Section 2254 proceeding, which was terminated by Chief Judge Garrett E. Brown, Jr. on April 3, 1990. See In re Clauso, 84-3406 (GEB).

2. Shortly prior to his second conviction, Clauso commenced another Section 2254 action, which was terminated by Chief Judge John F. Gerry on March 13, 1990. See Clauso v. Beyers, 88-2337 (JFG).²

3. On March 2, 1995, Clauso commenced his next section 2254 action; that petition was denied by Judge Joseph H. Rodriguez on June 6, 1996 for failure to exhaust state remedies. The Court of Appeals denied Clauso a certificate of appealability on December 20, 1996. See Clauso v. Morton, Civil Action No. 95-1003 (JHR), Docket Entry Nos. 7 and 11.
4. On December 17, 1999, Clauso commenced yet another Section 2254 action. See Clauso v. Lazzaro, Civil Action No. 99-5690 (AET). The Honorable Anne E. Thompson presided over that matter and dismissed Clauso's application without prejudice, again, as unexhausted. See id. Docket Entry No. 11. Having his motion for reconsideration denied by Judge Thompson, see id., Docket Entry No. 18, Clauso appealed. The Court of Appeals denied him a certificate of appealability on January 22, 2001.

² The electronic dockets in Clauso v. Beyers, 88-2337 (JFG) was created when the federal court system transitioned from hard-copy filings to electronic records, long after Clauso v. Beyers was terminated. As a result, the electronic docket in Beyers does not provide this Court with the specifics of Chief Judge Gerry's decision. However, the time-line of Clauso's many actions in state courts and in this District strongly suggests that Clauso's petition was dismissed by Chief Judge Gerry as unexhausted in state courts.

See id., Docket Entry No. 19.

5. Clauso's last Section 2254 application was filed on June 26, 2003. See Clauso v. Hendricks, Civil Action No. 03-3090 (FLW), Docket Entry No. 1. Judges Stanley R. Chesler and Freda L. Wolfson, who presided, in turn, over that proceeding, dismissed Clauso's petition with prejudice, as untimely. See id., Docket Entry Nos. 17 and 18. The Court of Appeals denied him a certificate of appealability on April 21, 2006.³ See id., Docket Entry No. 22.

B. In addition to the above-listed habeas matters, Clauso commenced at least ten civil rights actions in this District.

1. While still serving the prison term ensuing from his first conviction, Clauso commenced a Section 1983 action, which was terminated by Chief Judge

³ It appears that Clauso's limitations period expired during the gap between the time when his judgment becoming final and his application for post-conviction relief was filed. However, having no immediate access to the now-archived decisions rendered by Judges Chesler and Wolfson, this Court notes that: (a) this observation is not a conclusive finding; and (b) it has no direct impact on the analysis at hand.

Garrett E. Brown, Jr. on April 3, 1990. See
Clauso v. Koeingfest, 85-2589 (GEB).⁴

2. Less than a month prior to his second conviction, Clauso commenced another Section 1983 action. See Clauso v. Stillwell, Civil Action No. 88-3574 (WGB). Judges Stanley S. Brotman and William G. Bassler, presiding, in turn, over that action, dismissed Clauso's challenges by granting defendants' motion for summary judgment, see id., Docket Entry No. 57, and the Court of Appeals affirmed that decision on June 25, 1992. See id., Docket Entry No. 60.
3. While Clauso v. Stillwell was still pending before Judge Bassler, Clauso commenced yet another civil rights action. See Clauso v. Ortiz, Civil Action No. 91-4109 (MLC). Judge Mary L. Cooper and Chief Judge Brown, presiding, in turn, over that matter, dismissed Clauso's claims by ruling upon defendants' Rule 12(b)(6) and summary judgment motions and, shortly thereafter, denied Clauso's application for reconsideration. See id., Docket

⁴ The basis for that termination is not immediately apparent from the docket existing on the Public Access to Court Electronic Records ("PACER") system, as PACER was created many years after Clauso v. Koeingfest was terminated.

Entry Nos. 8, 52 and 55. Clauso v. Ortiz was conclusively terminated on December 5, 1996. See id., Docket Entry No. 55.

4. While Clauso v. Ortiz and the appeal in Clauso v. Stillwell were still pending, Clauso commenced his next Section 1983 action, Clauso v. Morton, Civil Action No. 97-5839 (MLC). Judge Cooper dismissed Clauso's challenges by granting defendants' Rule 12(b)(6) motions, see id., Docket Entry Nos. 25, 33 and 51, and directed the Clerk not to accept any further submissions from Clauso. See id., Docket Entry No. 46. Upon Clauso's appeal, the Court of Appeals affirmed Judge Cooper's determinations. See id., Docket Entry No. 56. The Court of Appeals' decision to that effect was entered on May 2, 2002.
5. While Clauso v. Morton was pending before Judge Cooper, Clauso initiated one more Section 1983 action, Clauso v. Lazzaro, 00-1838 (AJL). Judge Alfred J. Lechner, Jr., presiding over that matter, dismissed Clauso's challenges by granting defendants' motion for summary judgment. See id., Docket Entry Nos. 36 and 37. Upon Clauso's appeal, the Court of Appeals affirmed Judge

Lechner's decision. The Court of Appeals' mandate to that effect was issued on July 10, 2003. See id., Docket Entry No. 56.

6. Having just initiated Clauso v. Lazzaro, and only one month after Judge Cooper's dismissal of Clauso v. Morton, Clauso commenced yet another Section 1983 action. See Clauso v. Switaj, Civil Action No. 00-3131 (MLC). Judge Cooper directed administrative termination of that matter for Clauso's failure to prepay his filing fee (or, in the alternative, for his failure to duly apply for in forma pauperis status). See id., Docket Entry No. 1.
7. Yet, while Clauso v. Lazzaro was still proceeding before Judge Cooper, Clauso commenced one more Section 1983 action, Clauso v. Brooks, Civil Action No. 01-4502 (MLC). Judge Cooper dismissed Clauso's claims in part upon conducting sua sponte review, see id., Docket Entry No. 5, denied Clauso's motions for reconsideration, see id., Docket Entry Nos. 16, and administratively terminated that matter in light of Clauso's attempt to file an interlocutory appeal. See id., Docket Entry No. 33. The Court of Appeals denied Clauso's application for lack of appellate jurisdiction, and no further litigation ensued. See id., Docket Entry No. 38.

8. On June 23, 2010, Clauso commenced one more Section 1983 action, styling it as a Section 2254 petition. See Clauso v. Warden, 10-3816 (SRC); see also id., Docket Entry No. 2 (re-characterizing Clauso's submission into a civil complaint and denying Clauso in forma pauperis status). Judge Stanley R. Chesler, presiding over Clauso v. Warden, instructed Clauso that claims challenging conditions of confinement cannot be raised by means of a habeas application, see id., Docket Entry No. 2, at 1, and allowed Clauso 30 days from February 14, 2011, to either prepay the filing fee of $350 or to submit Clauso's in forma pauperis application (which would allow Clauso to proceed without prepayment of fees but with assessment of monthly charges toward his full payment of this $350 filing fee). See id. at 3-4. More than four months after Judge Chesler's issuance of the aforesaid order, Clauso submitted a $5 payment, i.e., the filing fee applicable to habeas actions having no connection to his Clauso

v. Warden challenges. Judge Chesler's ruling on that submission is still pending.

9. Shortly prior to the commencement of Clauso v. Warden, Clauso initiated yet another Section 1983 matter, which is currently pending before this Court: Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC). Specifically, on October 19, 2010, Clauso filed a § 1983 complaint challenging, again, his conditions of confinement. See Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306, Docket Entry No. 1. On March 1, 2011, Judge Michael A. Shipp, then acting as a Magistrate Judge assigned to that matter, directed appointment of pro bono counsel to Clauso. See id., Docket Entry No. 35. On June 30, 2011, that action was reassigned from Judge Chesler to the undersigned. See id., Docket Entry No. 44. On March 26, 2012, Richard G. Potter, Esq. ("Potter"), made appearance on behalf of Clauso and assumed representation of Clauso's legal interests in that action. See id., Docket Entry No. 54. However, nine days prior to becoming represented by Potter, Clauso filed a pro se application in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306, entitled "Petition for the Great Writ of Habeas Corpus [§] 2254." See id., Docket Entry No. 56. Because the aforesaid filing presented a mix of unspecified civil rights claims and seemingly new habeas challenges, this Court explained to Clauso, in great detail, the distinction between habeas and civil rights actions, the workings of habeas and civil procedure rules and the pleading requirements posed by Rules 8, 18 and 20. See id., Docket Entry No. 59; accord Clauso v. Glover, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89711, at *2-8 (D.N.J. June 26, 2012). In order to enable Clauso's good faith litigation of his unspecified civil rights and seemingly new habeas challenges, this Court directed the Clerk to create two new matters for Clauso, i.e., a civil rights action and a habeas action, and ordered Clauso -- in the event Clauso wished to litigate such challenges -- to prepay his filing fee in those action (or duly apply for in forma pauperis status) and submit an amended pleading in each such action, asserting the challenges relevant to the nature of each particular matter. See id. at *9-15. The Clerk, duly complying with this Court's order, opened two new dockets for Clauso, namely, Clauso v. Glover ("New Habeas Matter"), Civil Action No. 12-3969 (CCC) (a Section 2254 habeas action), and Clauso v. Does ("New Civil Matter"), Civil Action No. 12-3971 (CCC) (a Section 1983 civil rights action).

II. In response to this Court's aforesaid order and the Clerk's actions, Clauso made the following submissions:

- A. In his New Habeas Matter, he duly submitted his filing fee of $5.00 but did not file his amended petition. See, generally, New Habeas Matter, Docket.
- B. In his New Civil Matter, Clauso duly submitted his filing fee of $350.00, but he did not file his amended complaint. See, generally, New Civil Matter, Docket.

III. As a result, this Court:

- A. Issued an order in the New Habeas Matter allowing Clauso additional time to submit his amended petition and directing the Clerk to provide Clauso with another blank Section 2254 petition form. See New Habeas Matter, Docket Entry No. 4 (entered on August 17, 2012);
and
- B. Issued an order in the New Civil Matter allowing Clauso additional time to submit his amended complaint and directing the Clerk to provide Clauso with another blank civil complaint form. See New Civil Matter, Docket Entry No. 4 (entered on August 16, 2012). In conjunction with the same, this Court:

1. scrupulously re-explained to Clauso the workings of Rules 18 and 20, as well as Rule 8, as clarified by the Supreme Court in Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 (2009), and detailed by the Court of Appeals in Fowler v. UPMC Shadyside, 578 F.3d 203 (3d Cir. 2009);
2. stressed that Clauso's desire to "just . . . go home" was not amenable to litigation in either a civil action or a habeas matter, as the judicial branch lacks the mandate to direct clemency release; and
3. emphasized that prepayment of the applicable filing fee in no way assures one's success on the merits (as all matters are resolved in accordance with the governing legal principles, as applied to the facts alleged, while collection of the filing fee is merely an administrative measure having no impact on the substantive outcome of any litigation). This Court observed as follows:

in the event [Clauso], mistakenly believing that he can obtain any form of relief by simply paying the $350 fee in [the New Civil Matter] and/or by paying the $5 fee in [the

New Habeas Matter], submitted these monies without having a viable claim, [Clauso] shall inform this Court of his mistake in writing, and the Court will direct the Clerk to simply remit these erroneously prepaid funds back to Plaintiff. The Court notes that: (a) no sanction of any kind would ensue from [Clauso's] filing of such written statement, since [Clauso's] error appears bona fide and committed in good faith belief that a mere act of prepayment of filing fee would qualify him for relief; and (b) the judiciary has no interest in collecting filing fees in connection with actions litigants have no intent to litigate, and it would be inequitable to deprive [Clauso], a confined individual whose financial resources are likely to be scarce, from the funds he might have paid in error.

New Civil Matter, Docket Entry No. 4, at 7, n.5.

- IV. In response to this Court's clarifications, Clauso filed four letters in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC) (Docket Entries Nos. 67 - 70). These letters:
- A. indicate Clauso's belief that "the State ha[d] no right to keep [Clauso] in prison";
 - B. hint at Clauso's apparent displeasure with being held in segregated confinement;
 - C. contain abstract language and extensively utilize poetic licence;
 - D. state that the aforesaid "paperwork" is intended for filing in Clauso's New Habeas Matter and New Civil Matter;

E. assert a slew of challenges to Clauso's conviction, maintaining that he did not have a pre-sentencing report executed; and

F. alleges new claims regarding Clauso's conditions of confinement, asserting that he is being beaten by prison officials.

See id. (noting Clauso's belief that his "soul mate" must have written to this Court, referring to Clauso himself as an "old dog," referring to this Court as Clauso's "lady judge," promising to "write [this Court] a poem," stating that "God calls" on Clauso, making reference to Clauso's endeavor at "seeking peace and heaven," asserting that, as a result of Clauso's offense underlying his current confinement "no one was hurt or injured," and informing the Court that Clauso was "good with the Creator and . . . Lord Jesus Christ").

V. Finally, on September 7, 2012, the Clerk received yet one more complaint from Clauso, which arrived unaccompanied by either the filing fee or a duly executed in forma pauperis application. See Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC), Docket Entry No. 1. Naming six different persons as defendants in that matter, that latest complaint:

A. asserts, simultaneously, that Clauso's warden "refused to remove {Clauso} from a cell flooded with human waste" and that Clauso's warden directed Clauso's transfer to another cell, which Clauso found to be "freezing cold" during June and July of 2012;

- B. alleges that a prison guard is beating Clauso;
- C. states that another prison official took all of Clauso's clothing;
- D. claims that Clauso was left without food by yet another prison official, etc.; and
- E. concludes with a request for relief in the form of this Court's order "releas[ing Clauso] from the hole [where he has] been since June 9, 2012."⁵

Id.

VI. To the extent Clauso's letters docketed in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC), as Docket Entry Nos. 67 and 68, are intended to serve as a motion for reconsideration, such motion is granted in form and denied in substance.⁶

⁵ That request for relief is accompanied by Clauso's promise that, in the event this Court would not find a violation of Clauso's civil rights, Clauso's "sons and daughter [would] bring the deed . . . that has been in [Clauso's] family since 1914 [to the Court to prove that such deed allows for possession of] 30 acres in South Jersey." See Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC), Docket Entry No. 1, at 6.

⁶ The United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit has held that a litigant's motion for reconsideration should be deemed "granted" when the court (the decision of which the litigant is seeking a reconsideration of) addresses the merits – rather than the mere procedural propriety or lack thereof – of that motion. See Pena-Ruiz v. Solorzano, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 12436, at *2-3, n.1 (3d Cir. 2008). However, the very fact of the

Although Clauso's prior litigations in this District indicate that he has filed numerous motions for reconsideration and thus is likely to be familiar with the governing legal standard, the Court finds a brief review of the same warranted. A motion for reconsideration is a device of limited utility. There are only four grounds upon which a motion for reconsideration may be granted: (a) to correct manifest errors of law or fact upon which the judgment was based; (b) to present newly-discovered or previously unavailable evidence; (c) to prevent manifest injustice;⁷ and (d) to accord the decision to an intervening court's review does not prevent the court performing such reconsideration analysis (of the original application, as supplanted by the points raised in the motion for reconsideration) from reaching a disposition identical – either in its rationale or in its outcome, or in both regards – to the court's decision previously reached upon examination of the original application. See id.

⁷ In the context of a motion to reconsider, the term "manifest injustice" "[generally . . . means that the Court overlooked some dispositive factual or legal matter that was presented to it," In re Rose, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64622, at *3 (D.N.J. Aug. 30, 2007), making the definition an overlap with the prime basis for reconsideration articulated in Harsco Corp. v. Zlotnicki, 779 F.2d 906, 909 (3d Cir. 1985), that is, the need "to correct manifest errors of law or fact upon which the judgment was based." Alternatively, the term "manifest injustice" could be defined as "'an error in the trial court that is direct, obvious, and observable.'" Tenn. Prot. & Advocacy, Inc. v. Wells, 371 F.3d 342, 348 (6th Cir. 2004) (quoting Black's Law Dictionary 974 (7th ed. 1999)). "[M]ost cases [therefore,] use the term 'manifest injustice' to describe the result of a plain error." Douglass v. United Services Auto. Ass'n, 79 F.3d 1415, 1425 (5th Cir. 1996).

change in prevailing law. See 11 Charles A. Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Mary Kay Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2810.1 (2d ed. 1995); see also Harsco Corp. v. Zlotnicki, 779 F.2d 906, 909 (3d Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1171 (1986) (the purpose of a motion for reconsideration is to correct manifest errors of law or fact or to present newly discovered evidence). "To support reargument, a moving party must show that dispositive factual matters or controlling decisions of law were overlooked by the court in reaching its prior decision." Assisted Living Associates of Moorestown, L.L.C., v. Moorestown Tp., 996 F. Supp. 409, 442 (D.N.J. 1998). In contrast, mere disagreement with the district court's decision is an inappropriate ground for a motion for reconsideration; such disagreement should be raised through the appellate process. See id. (citing Birmingham v. Sony Corp. of America, Inc., 820 F. Supp. 834, 859 n.8 (D.N.J. 1992), aff'd, 37 F.3d 1485 (3d Cir. 1994); G-69 v. Degnan, 748 F. Supp. 274, 275 (D.N.J. 1990)); see also Drysdale v. Woerth, 153 F. Supp. 2d 678, 682 (E.D. Pa. 2001) (a motion for reconsideration may not be used as a means to reargue unsuccessful theories). Consequently, "[t]he Court will only entertain such a motion where the overlooked matters, if considered by the Court, might reasonably have resulted in a different conclusion."

Assisted Living, 996 F. Supp. at 442; see also Continental Cas. Co. v. Diversified Indus., Inc., 884 F. Supp. 937, 943 (E.D. Pa. 1995) ("[M]otions for reconsideration should be granted sparingly"); Edward H. Bohlin, Co. v. Banning Co., Inc., 6 F.3d 350, 355 (5th Cir. 1993) (a district court "has considerable discretion in deciding whether to reopen a case under Rule 59(e)"). Here, Clauso's letters: (a) state only his factless, self-serving conclusion that he is in a wrongful confinement; (b) express nothing but Clauso's unactionable emotions; but (c) have no relevance to this Court's directive to submit amended pleadings asserting Clauso's habeas and/or civil rights challenges. Clauso's letters cannot merit vacatur of this Court's prior orders directing commencement of the New Habeas Matter and New Civil Matter and Clauso's filing of amended pleadings in these matters in the event Clauso believes he has new meritorious claims to litigate.

VII. While Clauso's letters docketed in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC), as Docket Entry Nos. 67 and 68 have no bearing on the issues litigated in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC),⁸ these two letters and, especially, Clauso's letter docketed in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC), as Docket Entry No. 69, appear relevant to Clauso's proceedings in the New Habeas Matter and New Civil Matter. At this juncture, both the content and the spirit of Clauso's letters strongly suggest that Clauso has no viable habeas claim to litigate. Rather, it appears that he simply laments over the outcome of his state criminal proceedings and denial of his federal habeas application as untimely, and Clauso seems to conflate, either unintentionally or by design, his conditions-of-confinement civil rights claims with his request for habeas relief.

A. The Court is mindful of Clauso's emotions. However, as this Court already pointed out in its prior ruling, the mandate of the Article III judiciary is limited to, and only to, resolution of "Cases" or "Controversies." See U.S. Const. Art. III, § 2; accord Spencer v. Kemna, 523 U.S. 1, 7 (1998); Aetna Life Ins. Co. of Hartford v. Haworth, 300 U.S. 227, 240 (1937) (a lawsuit "must be definite and concrete, touching the legal relations of parties having adverse legal interests"). In other words, there must be an actual dispute between adverse litigants concerning an issue where there is a substantial likelihood that a decision by a federal court, rendered within that court's mandate, would bring about some sort of desired change or effect. See U.S. Nat'l Bank of Or. v. Indep. Ins. Agents of Am., Inc., 508 U.S. 439, 446 (1993) (noting that the suit must pursue "an honest and actual antagonistic assertion of rights by one [party] against another" and that these "valuable legal rights [would] be directly affected to a specific and substantial degree" by a decision on the matter by a federal court) (internal quotations omitted). No federal judge has a mandate to act upon their emotions or grant litigants' meritless claims (even if these claims are stated with great eloquence, emotion or resort to poetic licence). Thus, Clauso's "poetic license" letters are not a basis for relief. See Ronald A. Cass, Judging: Norms and Incentives of Retrospective Decision-Making, 75 B.U. L. Rev. 941, 944 (1995) ("[A popular caricature] of judicial decision-making is extreme legal realism, which supposes that judges' decisions depend on . . . 'what the judge ate for breakfast' on the morning of a decision") (quoting Jerome Frank, Law and the Modern Mind 118-59, 207, 264-84 (1930)). Simply put, dry facts stated in a clear and concise pleading speak volumes for the purposes of any legal proceeding, while eloquent poetic "nothings" are invariably dismissed as pure rhetoric. Therefore, this Court strongly urges Clauso to reduce his future submissions, if any such submissions are made in the New Habeas Matter and/or New Civil Matter, or in Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC), to simple statements of fact and legal claims. Accord Imoore v. Gasbarro, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 73114, at *16 (D.N.J. May 24, 2012) (citing Advanta Corp. Sec. Litig., 180 F.3d 525, 534 (3d Cir. 1999), quoting DiLeo v. Ernst & Young, 901 F.2d 624, 627 (7th Cir. 1990), "for the observation that a pleading must [merely] indicate 'the who, what, when, where, and how: the first paragraph of any newspaper story'").

- B. The letters docketed in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC), as Docket Entry Nos. 67 and 68, and the submission in Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC), Docket Entry No. 1, especially if assessed in light of Clauso's failure to submit an amended pleading in the New Habeas Matter, strongly suggest that Clauso has no viable habeas claim to litigate. Accordingly, it appears equitable for this Court to direct the Clerk to remit Clauso's filing fees in the New Habeas Matter. However, out of abundance of caution, the Court will allow Clauso one last extension of time to submit an amended pleading in that action.⁹

VIII. While Clauso's submissions seem to indicate that he has no viable habeas claim to litigate, such filings do suggest that Clauso might be striving to articulate civil rights challenges which, if reduced to plain English statements meeting the requirements posed by Rules 18 and 20, could amount to plausible claim(s) within the meaning of Rule 8. However, as of now, Clauso's patchy submissions assert a panoply of unrelated transactions, each involving a different defendant and leaving the Court to guess the specific facts at issue in his various claims. Indeed, at this juncture, it is entirely unclear: (a) which claims, if any, asserted in Clauso's latest submissions are intended to operate as amended claims for the purposes of Clauso's New Civil Matter (with regard to which Clauso prepaid the filing fee); and (b) which claims, if any, were meant to be litigated in Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC), where no filing fee was received and no in forma pauperis status was either sought or granted.¹⁰ In other words, as of now, the Court cannot guess how many civil claims Clauso wishes to litigate and in which actions. The panoply of Clauso's challenges, if assessed under the requirements of Rules 18 and 20, well exceed two sets of claims. Nonetheless, the Court is obligated to allow Clauso an opportunity to be the master of his claims. Thus, Clauso may: (a) select the transactionally-related or related-by-defendant allegations he wishes to prosecute in the New Civil Matter and/or in Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC); and (b) reflect on whether he wishes to prepay the applicable filing fee in either or in both of these actions (or whether he wishes to seek in forma pauperis status in either or in both of these matters).

⁹ In the event Clauso elects to make such a habeas submission, he should accompany the same with the applicable filing fee(s) or valid in forma pauperis application(s). This Court's directive to the Clerk to remit the funds to Clauso shall not be construed as the Court's statement that Clauso would be allowed to litigate any habeas challenges without prepayment of the applicable filing fee or without properly obtaining in forma pauperis status.

IT IS, therefore, on this 26 day of September, 2012, ORDERED that the Clerk shall reopen Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 12-3969 (CCC), and Clauso v. Does, Civil Action No. 12-3971 (CCC), by making a new and separate entry on the dockets of each of these two matters, reading "CIVIL CASE REOPENED;" and it is further ¹⁰ To complicate the matters further, Clauso's submissions are executed in handwriting that is difficult to comprehend. While no pro se litigant is required to type their pleading, a handwritten pleading must be fully readable. Therefore, the Court urges Clauso to carefully and clearly hand-print his pleadings, writing only on the lines provided. Clauso shall avoid writing on the margins or scribbling between the lines.

ORDERED that the letters filed in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC), as Docket Entry Nos. 67 and 68, are construed as motions for reconsideration of this Court's prior order (docketed in that matter as Docket Entry No. 59); and it is further ORDERED that Clauso's motions for reconsideration are granted in form and denied in substance, and this Court's prior order, docketed in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 09-5306 (CCC), as Docket Entry No. 59 (and replicated in Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 12-3969 (CCC), and in Clauso v. Does, Civil Action No. 12-3971 (CCC), as Docket Entry No. 2) shall remain in force; and it is further ORDERED that the Clerk shall remit to Clauso the filing fee of $5.00 submitted in connection with Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 12-3969 (CCC); and it is further ORDERED that the Clerk shall remit to Clauso the filing fee of $350.00 submitted in connection with the submissions made in Clauso v. Does, Civil Action No. 12-3971 (CCC); and it is further ORDERED that the Clerk shall administratively terminate Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 12-3969 (CCC), and Clauso v. Does, Civil Action No. 12-3971 (CCC), by making a new and separate entry on the dockets of each of these two matters, reading "CIVIL CASE TERMINATED;" and it is further ORDERED that Clauso may have Clauso v. Glover, Civil Action No. 12-3969 (CCC), and/or Clauso v. Does, Civil Action No. 12-3971 (CCC), reopened in the event Clauso submits in those matters: (a) his amended pleading(s) stating the facts and challenges clearly and concisely, in accordance with Rule 8 (applicable to civil complaints) and Habeas Rule 2 (applicable to habeas petitions), without resort to generalities, poetic licence, undue rhetoric, threats, etc., but rather carefully reflecting on the guidance provided in this Court's prior determinations issued in his matters; and (b) the applicable filing fee(s) or valid in forma pauperis application(s); and it is further ORDERED that Clauso's application to prosecute Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC), in forma pauperis is denied. Such denial is without prejudice, and Clauso may seek in forma pauperis status in that matter by submitting a valid in forma pauperis application; and it is further

ORDERED that the Clerk shall administratively terminate Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC), by making a new and separate entry on the dockets of that matter, reading "CIVIL CASE TERMINATED;" and it is further ORDERED that Clauso may have Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC), reopened in the event he submits an amended complaint in that action and accompanies the same with a valid in forma pauperis application or with a filing fee of $350.00; and it is further

ORDERED that Clauso's amended pleadings in Clauso v. Does, Civil Action No. 12-3971 (CCC), and in Clauso v. Lagano, 12-5601 (CCC), should be executed in accordance with the requirements of Rules 18 and 20, asserting only the claims that are properly transactionally-related or related-by-defendant; and it is further

ORDERED that all Clauso's future filings must be executed in a careful, readable handwriting or typed; and it is further

ORDERED that the Clerk shall serve, by regular U.S. mail, a copy of this Memorandum Opinion and Order upon Clauso, and shall enclose in said mailing: (a) two blank civil complaint forms;¹¹ (b) a blank Section 2254 habeas petition form; and (c) three applications for confined individuals seeking to proceed in forma pauperis;¹² and it is finally

¹¹ In the event Clauso believes that his allegations, even though asserted in accordance with Rules 8, 18 and 20, cannot be reduced to statements fitting the space allotted, Clauso shall supplement his allegations by statements neatly hand-printed (or typed) on the back of the page. Clauso shall alert the Clerk to the fact that his allegations are continued on the back of the page by writing "SEE OVER: ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS ON THE BACK OF THIS PAGE." Clauso is also reminded that, for the purposes of his civil rights challenges, Clauso shall specify the alleged wrongs each named defendant committed and detail the specific facts of each such alleged wrong.

¹² If the institutional account of the petitioner exceeds $200, the petitioner shall not be considered eligible to proceed in forma pauperis in a habeas matter. See Local Civil Rule

ORDERED that no statement made in this Memorandum Opinion and Order shall be construed as indicating withdrawal of this Court's jurisdiction over any of the above-captioned matters.

United States District Judge

81.2(c). In contrast, in Adkins v. E. I. DuPont De Nemours & Co., Inc., 335 U.S. 331 (1948), the Supreme Court clarified that the district court enjoys discretion to determine whether the payment of the fees would be unduly burdensome upon a litigant prosecuting a civil rights action. See id.; see also Kinney v. Plymouth Rock Squab Co., 236 U.S. 43, 46 (1915).
